The Global Challenge of Peace: 1919 as a Contested Threshold to a New World Order
(Studies in Labour History 17)
Edited by Matt Perry

Introduction: Matt Perry

Part I: Race, labour and empire
Chapter 2: Within and Beyond Red Clydeside: Co-existing Labour Movements and Racial Hostilities in 1919. Paul Griffin
Chapter 3: The 1919 Mutinies in the French Armed Forces: Colonialism, Ethnicity and the Remaking of the French left. Matt Perry
Chapter 4: C.L.R. James, the Mass Strike of 1919 in Colonial Trinidad and ‘The Case for West Indian Self-Government’. Christian Hogsbjerg

Part II: Transnationalism Women’s activism in 1919
Chapter 5: Sylvia Pankhurst in 1919: Feminism, Communism, and Interwar Internationalism. Neelam Srivastava
Chapter 6: Women as Peacemakers: The Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom in Zurich, 1919. Sarah Hellawell
Chapter 7: 1919: Opportunities and Constraints for Women Activists; a Case Study of Marie-Louise Puech and Hannah Sheehy Skeffington. Máire Cross

Part III: Revolution and Counter-revolution
Chapter 8: The Forward March of Reactionary Working-Class Politics? Democratic Authoritarianism and ‘Modernity’ in Britain and Ireland, 1919. Christopher Loughlin
Chapter 9: 1919: Revolution in Austria. Tim Kirk

Part IV: Contested Transitions to Peace
Chapter 11: Soldiers, Veterans and Volunteers for Gabriele D’Annunzio’s Occupation of Fiume. Megan Trudell
Chapter 12: How Did Military/Civilian Dynamics Shape Adult Education in Britain with the Soldiers’ Return and Demobilisation? Jude Murphy and Nigel Todd
Chapter 13: British Military Missions as Intermediaries between Western Europe and Lithuania in 1919-1920s. Estela Rukseniene

Part V: Reinterpretations of 1919
Chapter 15: The German Revolution at War’s End: Whose Revolution? Anthony McElligott